Invasion Begins Work Cleaning Up Stricken Torreon

BODIES OF THE DEAD BURNED

Long Nurse Found in Charge of 200 Wounded Soldiers Abandoned by Villistas; Villa Hides Them in Secret; Rebel Leader Hero of Engagement.

TORREON, Mex., via El Paso, April 4.—This city, from which General Velasco and most of the unfortunates of his command fled yesterday, was occupied by the rebels in force today and the work of burning the bodies of the dead, clearing away the wreckage of shattered automobiles, walls, street barricades and barbed-wire entanglements was begun.

When Velasco fled he left behind him in the military hospital, 200 wounded. When the rebels entered the place they found only one nurse, Dorothy de la Cruz, in attendance. She said the other nurses fled the wreckage of shattered automobiles, walls, street barricades and barbed-wire entanglements was begun.

WOMAN RADICAL POUNCES ON TRIAL OF ACCUSED PARSON

Industrial Worker Forces Her Way Into Temple Where Minister is Being Heard.

NEW YORK, April 4.—June Est, heretofore identified with movements of the Industrial Workers of the World, created consternation at the Metropolitan Temple today by trying to force her way into the trial of Dr. Jacob H. Price, pastor of the Westminster Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, who is charged with misconduct by nine women members of his congregation.

At the door she was confronted by Dr. Frank J. Belcher, pastor of the Five Points mission, acting as attorney for the defendant.

"Let me in," she shouted, in tones which immediately drew a large crowd. "This is not a private trial, ecclesiasticism has always whitewashed its pastors when charges are made against them. There is great deal of talk about shielding the pastors."

"I want to see Doctor Price," she continued. "I'd like to see him try to kiss me."

It has been charged that Doctor Price, among other things, tried to kiss a woman member of his congregation.

Followed by the crowd, the woman succeeded in pushing her way into the temple but could get no farther than the witness room. Here she described herself as a "church cleaner."

During the I. W. W. rally on New York churches recently, June Est was a prominent speaker. She compared the movement to the French revolution.

WON'T ADOPT NEW SYSTEM
Pittsburgh-Buffalo Company Refuses to Pay on Mine Run Plan.

CANONSBURG, April 4.—Representatives of the Pittsburgh-Buffalo Coal Company today flatly told the miners who yesterday demanded that they be paid on a run-of-mine basis that the company would not inaugurate the new system.

There has been no disorder at the mines, but a number of guards have been assigned to duty at the Hazen pit near here.

It was said today that fully 20,000 miners in Washington county have refused to obey the orders of their union and return to work pending the signing of the scale.

COLLIERS, W. Va., April 4.—John C. Palmer, attorney for the striking miners of the West Virginia & Pittsburgh Coal Company today sent to the miners a letter in which he stated that the men would return to work.

Among other things, the men who have been on strike since last September, demanded that the company recognize the union and abolish the company store.

The miners having been moved from their camp by order of Judge Byrd, the Federal District Court, have pitched their tents just over the line in Pennsylvania, where women and children were today said to be sadly in need of clothing.

SHIPPERS OPPOSE CHANGE IN WINTER FREIGHT TARIFFS
Declare Existing Differentials Should Not be Disturbed

Any change should be in favor of the Winter Rates, is Testimony Before Interstate Commerce Commission. Heavy Interests at Stake.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Consolidation of lake and rail freight rates, changes in their relation to the proposed 5 per cent advance in rates, was resumed today by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Objections are controlled by certain differentials in the rates, the transportation rates between the same points. It is not so much an opposition to the proposed increase in rates, but as to the preservation of an advance should be permitted of existing differentials or perhaps the establishment of differentials more favorable to shippers.

Ocean and rail traffic, as well as lake and rail traffic, also is governed by differentials to destinations as far west as the Mississippi river. Intermediate points enjoying the advantage of proportionately lower rates than the ultimate destinations.

Objection is made by some shippers to a disturbance of existing schedule conditions to their disadvantage, and it is urged by others that even the existing differentials in certain instances at least might well be increased. The ocean and rail and lake and rail traffic is enormously heavy and it is urged insistently that any disturbance of present conditions would bear upon it erroneously.

DOES ANYONE WANT A BABY? MARY ANN THORPE SEEKS HOME

Mother Unable to Support 14 Months Old Babe Will Bind Her Out

HUSBAND HAS DESERTED HER

Isolating Woman Finds Struggle to Keep Two Children in Too Much for Her and Decides to Surrender the Younger One; Mary Ann Is Pretty.

Scarfing her mother-love in her fight to eke out an existence, Mrs. Mary Ann Thorpe, deserted wife of John Wallace Thorpe of Leisnering No. 1, offers her 14 months old baby, Mary Ann, for sale. All the mother wants in return for the little one, however, is a guarantee that she will be well cared for. She asks no money consideration.

Mrs. Thorpe has one other child, a daughter four years old. Her husband deserted her several months ago after contributing practically nothing, she says, to her support in their wretched life. He joined the army and later deserted it. He was caught and returned and so far as is known is now serving out his enlistment.

Left with two children to support, Mrs. Thorpe at last finds the struggle too much for her. Little Mary Ann must be taken along when she goes to work and she is just an age when she needs great care, consequently it impairs her mother's usefulness to have her along.

Little Mary Ann is a pretty youngster, in splendid health, and just bubbling over with good nature. She doesn't understand why her presence in the world should cause such trouble. All her childish mind has grasped is that it is nice to be alive, to play, to crawl and crawl as she plays about the floor of her home.

Several couples whose homes would have welcomed the arrival of a little Mary Ann, have sought to adopt her, but the mother has refused until now she feels that she must let the little one go if she is to continue in the struggle for an existence, which grows harder and harder as the cost of living goes up.

The mother was to be seen at Leisnering No. 1, either by letter or on personal visit. Anyone will tell you where to find her and little Mary Ann.

KILLED AT INDIAN CREEK
Youth Victim of First Fatal Accident on Valley Road.

The first fatal accident on the Tard Creek Valley railroad since the opening of the railroad, eight years ago, occurred this morning when Fredrick Nicklow, 16 years old, lost his life while attempting to jump on a freight train. During the construction of the road there was not seen a serious accident.

Nicklow resided near Indian Creek and as he was boarding a car he lost his footing and fell between the cars. The wheels passed over him severing the right leg and crushing him between the hips. His companions, John and William, witnessed the accident. The body was brought to Connellsville and removed to Funerals Director C. C. Mitchell's establishment and prepared for burial. Nicklow was a son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Nicklow.

FIND SUPPOSED ATTACK OF GRIP IS SMALL POX

Woman's Storekeeper Waited on Trade for Week While Dreaded Disease Developed.

MEYERSDALE, April 6.—Smallpox has again broken out in southern Somerset county, this time closer to Meyersdale. Dr. A. M. Lehigh of Salisbury was summoned to the home of George Bowman yesterday to treat him and his two children who were supposed to be suffering from an attack of grip. The appearance of the patient was such that Dr. Charles E. Large of Meyersdale, county medical inspector for the State Health Department, and the latter diagnosed the case as smallpox.

Mr. Bowman conducts a general store at the stop along the Pennsylvania & Maryland trolley line known as "Dawson's," about four miles south of here. He had been ill for over a week before he summoned a physician and in that time was regularly in his store waiting upon customers.

The police chief is said to have been notified of the case and immediately fears that an epidemic may result, though they have done everything to prevent the spread of the disease after discovering it at such a late hour.

The Bowman family has been placed under strict quarantine and the hired girl who left the place on Monday and came to Meyersdale was taken back and placed under guard with the rest of the family.

About a month ago there were 20 cases of smallpox at Coal Run, and it is believed that many coming from there to Bowman's store may have spread the disease.

DECIDE ON POLICE HEAD
Council Said to be Waiting to Secure Consent of Appointee.

At a conference of city council last night, a police chief is said to have been definitely decided upon. If the man chosen accepts the position, it is said, he may be elected at the regular session Monday night.

The police situation was again discussed at all angles and the decision is said to have been reached that a man of executive ability shall be installed as "superintendent" rather than chief, in that he shall not be required to do the work that falls to a policeman's lot.

City Detective Eagan's report was received. Whether this will eventually be made public is a matter of conjecture. Eagan is said to have contended that his services are not as efficient as those of a detective permanently.

The increase of the force to almost twice its present numbers is said to have been advocated in the report and various reforms which Eagan has suggested in his observation leads him to believe are absolutely necessary.

MERCHANTS DENY EFFORT TO CHANGE THE RAILROAD PAYS

Rumors of Interference With Railroadmen Are Branded as False

THIRTY-FIVE SIGN THE PROTEST

Declare That Good Sense and Good Judgment Should Recognize the Policy of the Reports; Ask That Committee Investigate Matter.

Taking cognizance for the first time of rumors assiduously circulated to the effect that they have sought to have the railroad companies postpone pay-days or to prevent the issuance of passes to railroad men's families, Connellsville merchants today make a complete denial of all the reports in an advertisement printed in another column of this newspaper.

The advertisement is signed by 35 of the leading merchants of the city. At the time of the decision on the part of the railroad of the state to discontinue the issuance of passes to the families of employees, the rumor spread that certain Connellsville merchants had gone to Harrisburg in an effort to influence legislation to that end. The rumor declared that their action was to keep the wives of railroad men from going out of town to do their shopping in the belief that they would not receive free transportation over the railroads. This the merchants emphatically deny, declaring that there never was any move of this sort, either individually or collectively.

Another report that received credence was that the merchants had gone to the railroad companies and requested them to postpone their pay-days when such paydays were scheduled immediately previous to a holiday or the appearance of a circus in town. The merchants declare that this report is absolutely false, and one that shows sense and judgment should immediately brand as such. They declare that they recognize the right of every man to draw his pay at the end of the month and spend it in such manner as he sees fit.

The merchants further call upon the railroad employees to ferret out the originators of these reports and request that they appoint a committee to take up with the officials of the various roads the matter of whether or not an effort has been made by the merchants on the points involved in the rumors, and satisfy themselves beyond doubt that these rumors are baseless.

AUTOS STRIKE BRIDGE
Car Skids and Rattles on West Side of Structure.

An automobile, whose owner is not known, crashed into the side of the Trough bridge facing the West Side Hotel, last evening and was overturned. The car was considerably battered but the driver backed off and drove across the bridge almost before anyone knew what had happened.

The car is said to have approached the bridge at a fairly clip and, failing to make the turn, skidded toward the sidewalk, crashing into the railing. The force of the collision was so great that the front end of the car and torn loose from the state support.

On Thursday night a car driven by a Connellsville physician met with a similar accident at the bridge, but neither the car nor driver suffered injuries.

MORE JAIL SENTENCES.
Mayor Sends Two More Men to the County Jail.

F. Irvin of town was sentenced to 20 days in jail or $20 fine in police court this morning charged with being drunk and disorderly. William Shipley was also given 15 days to jail. Chief Rottler charged him with being a regular drunk, saying that he had told him several times to leave the hub room at the city hall and go home but that he always managed to turn up again.

The chief is beginning to think that he will not order if the mayor does not stop giving jail sentences. He will take the two men to Uniontown today, took one yesterday, and two the day before, and he says that the car fare is mounting up.

SUCH MUDDY WATER.
Mountain Reservoir Supply Turned Into Down Town Mains.

The down town water mains were either so full of water for an hour or so this afternoon, as the result of turning the McCoy Springs reservoir supply into those pipes. The water from the mountain came with such pressure that considerable sediment was dislodged.

It was stated by officials of the water company that the pipes would be quickly cleared of the sediment, sparkling water again supply.

An Old Man Reveals the Secret of Success.
Power in the barber shop, the other day a young fellow asked an old man who is well the best way to amass the cash. The old fellow who is rather craft answered him in four words: "Stop spending; start saving." He couldn't have said anything more to the point if he had talked for an hour. Stop spending and start saving, put your savings in a reliable bank at interest, and success is certain. The First National of Connelleville is old and safe and strong and pays 4 per cent. BAD TEETH A MENACE

Figures Show 12,000,000 School Children are Afflicted.

Figures compiled by the American Museum of Natural History show that there are upwards of 12,000,000 school children in the United States with defective teeth. In many schools this represents approximately fifty per cent of the pupils, but in some schools the number runs as high as ninety per cent.

In Greater New York 125,928 cases of defective teeth among school children were found, of which 67,580 were in the Borough of Manhattan. Approximately fifty per cent of these cases were remedied by the dentists of the department of health. The American Museum of Natural History is making a strenuous effort to teach the children the extreme importance of caring for their teeth, and for this purpose has imported from Germany a number of large cross-sectional models of teeth which show graphically various stages and conditions of decay and destruction.

DEATHS OF THE DAY

ROBERT WELSH DIES.

Former Justice and School Board Secretary Passes Away.

Robert Welsh, 62 years old, a former secretary of the Connelleville school board, and a former justice of the peace, died last night at 11:30 o'clock at his home, No. 529 Highland avenue, following a lingering illness of nearly a decade. He had been in poor health for the past year and had been unable to work since June. For the past several weeks was confined to his bed. Funeral services will be held from the family residence tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock with Rev. J. L. Prouditt, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church officiating. Fayette Lodge No. 219 Knights of Pythias, will have charge. The body will be shipped to Brownsville for internment Monday morning on the Pennsylvania railroad train due here at 10:47 o'clock by Funeral Director C. C. Mitchell.

Mr. Welsh was born in Scotland, October 13, 1851, coming to this country with his grandparents at the age of 16 years. He settled at Belle-voe and after residing there for a short time came to Connelleville, and spent the remainder of his life here. Thirty-nine years ago he was married in Brownsville to Miss Anna Lindy, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Lindy. They had seven children, seven of whom are now living. William W. of Connelleville, and Miss Emma Welsh at home. Mr. Welsh was a Democrat and for several years was a member of the school board, serving as secretary of the board the greater part of that time. He was appointed justice of the peace to fill the unexpired term of the late Judge Richard. He was a member of the First Presbyterian Church, Fayette Lodge No. 219 Knights of Pythias, Knights of Malta, the Improved Order of Bayswatha, and was a director of the Peoples Building and Loan Association.

Forty-four years ago Mr. Welsh entered the service of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad as storekeeper and was later made a clerk in the master mechanic's office, which position he held until his retirement. He was one of the best known and most highly respected citizens of Connelleville. In addition to his widow and two children, he is survived by a grandson, Robert Welsh, Jr.

FIGHT ON AUDIT REPORT TO RENEW IN SOMERSET

Jenner Township Citizens Seek Probe, Charging Gross Irregularities in Accounts.

Special to The Courier.

SOMERSET, April 4.—The appeal of citizens of Jenner township from the auditors' report of that district for the year 1913, which was quashed by the court several weeks ago because it was filed in the court of quarter sessions instead of the court of common pleas took a new turn today when Judge Ruppel awarded a rule on the road supervisors of the township to show cause why the appeal shall not be granted. The rule was awarded on a petition charging the supervisors with practicing fraud upon the taxpayers of the district.

The petitioners specifically charge the road supervisors with fraudulently embezzling the amount of money borrowed in the name of the township. According to the settlement between the auditors and the supervisors the district's borrowed money aggregates only $1,850 when in fact, the petitioners contend, it totals $1,500, $3,500 borrowed from the First National Bank of Russell, $500 from Lavan Bowman, and $500 from Abram Truvel.

Irregularities in the sum of $64.75 in imaginary exonerations of road tax is alleged, the claim being made that there were no road tax exonerations at all.

The complaining taxpayers also allege that the supervisors bought a road roller for $2,500, paying $700 more than the same is worth. In addition, it is alleged that the salaries of roadmasters were "padded" throughout the township.

The completing taxpayers also allege that the supervisors bought a road roller for $2,500, paying $700 more than the same is worth. In addition, it is alleged that the salaries of roadmasters were "padded" throughout the township.

"A soldier of England, an aide to Hamilton! You lie. When Hamilton knows what I know he will tear you limb from limb. You come here to fight us with your threats—you! I spit upon you! See-to-wah, warriors, war me, you know who I am; I travel with you on the war-trail; I go with you into battle. Now I speak with my straight tongue. You do not know me, but I do. See; he dare not see me; watch him shrink back afraid. Well there is reason."

"I fear you, Jules Lappin!"

"Ah! and with cause. Know you over the time I failed to pay my debts or break my vengeance? I have you now, and will crush the white-livered heart out of you with these hands. Listen, Shawnee, this is my friend, while I tell you who this fellow is, then give him to me—I ask no more."

"He is a renegade, a traitor," and Lappin's hand pointed at the man he accused, "the uniform he wears a lie. How do I know? Because he thought me yonder in the woods on the island, because he was in the cabin with the others. This is the man who was left for dead, who escaped. Do you recognize him now?"

"I saw the red faces, and heard the scream of voices."

"Ah! you do; and the woman, the Wyandot squaw, helped him. I said so before, now we have the proof. You drove her out, afraid to treat her as an enemy, and she goes to him, thinking his uniform will frighten you into sparing the hunter from torture. She brings him here to threaten you with what England will do. What say you, Shawnee, to the dog?"

"The voice burst into a wild yell that seemed to split the night, but the fur under Lappin's hand."

"Back all of you!" he roared savagely. "I claim this man as mine! Who has better right? I'll throttle the life out of him with my bare hands before you all. Have your warriors go to us, see-to-wah."

"The chief of the Shawnee, his eyes shining under tangled hair, uplifted his arms."

"This the white man's right," he replied grimly. "I have spoken."

"I drew in my breath deeply, yet what could I do? The rifle trembled in my hands, but I dare not use it. The unfortunate Englishman stood in my place, was mistaken for me, but if I revealed myself it could serve no end—would only leave me helpless to aid the girl I could not think of him at that moment, but only of her. What would be her fate when this struggle was over? Maddened by the fight, could those savages be controlled? Would she be spared? I had no time to think; my blood was like ice—I could only think of her, my precious spectacle, reddened by flame, as my lips muttered a prayer, 'God help me to do the best thing!'"

"It was all the work of an instant. Lappin whirled on his victim, flinging his gun to the ground."

"Face me, you cur, you spy!" he shouted. "Come out from behind that squaw. You got me once when my rifle slipped. Let's see what you can do now. What! You won't? Well, you will!"

"He thrust home back, hurling her with one sweep of his arm into the crowd of warriors, one of whom clutched her as she fell. Then he struck the shrieking, startled Englishman a vicious blow in the face."

CHAPTER XIX.

In the Hands of Savages.

I saw the red welt on the white cheek left by the fur trader's rough hand, his arms flung up, a sudden raising of anger darkening his eyes. This was more than flesh and blood could stand, and not retaliate. Wild rage usurped the place of courage; his lips snarled like a cornered wolf; he had forgotten all but hate. It was not a man, but a maddened animal who crouched for a spring.

"Fight you! I will! Yes, to the death," he snapped out hotly. "But you lie when you say I fought you before; when you say I was in the cabin—you lie, you dog of a white savage—you lie!"

"Messieurs, it is a mistake," I caught the girl's protesting voice in the bush. "It was not—"

"A lie, boy!" Lappin broke in crazed with rage. "What am I—blind? I saw you, you bound, with my own eyes, shut the squaw up. Oh! you will; then have it now!"

"They met like two enraged bucks in the forest, clashing at each other in blind, deadly battle. They were big men, evenly matched, fired with hatred. Never did I witness such fighting, such mad barbarism, the re-fectly of which stopped at nothing. The soldier I knew was unarmed, but a knife dangled at Lappin's belt. Either he forgot it, or in his rage he failed to use the steel. Oh! how they fought—like two cats, snarling and snapping, throttling each other, occasionally an arm breasting free to send a clinched fist crashing into an exposed face. Once the soldier went down to his knees, and Lappin kicked him, only to be gripped himself and flung headlong. But they were up together, bleeding both, panting for breath, clothes half ripped off their bodies, cursing fiercely, as they rushed at each other once more. There was no mercy asked or given. Straining, stumbling, exerting every ounce of strength, using every trick, they swung back and forth across the open forest space. It was brutal, devilish. Ah! and so were those who watched."

"Merciful Mother! What a sight that was! I, a soldier, and border-bred, hid my face in my arms—and yet I looked and saw. The very ferocity of it was a fascinating horror—the black, black light above, around, the forests shutting them in; the howling dogs snapping at their heels; the red glare of fire, and that ring of yelling savages, dancing back and forth to give the combatants room. Rene had disappeared—forced back into the half-crazed mass, as the savages surged forward; of Brady I caught no glimpse."

The Very Ferocity of It Was a Fascinating Horror.

That was no scene to ever forget, to blot out with passing years. The wild savagery of it burned in on the brain; those dark faces, with wild eyes and dangling hair; the waving arms, and leaping bodies, the gleam of weapons tossed about, the jungle and din of excited voices in jargon of unknown tongues. How the red flames danced over them all, now in shadow, now in glare of light, making them appear fiends incarnate. And those two battling in the midst, huge men in death struggle, fighting as tigers fight—no morose, moroseless; tearing each other's flesh, battering each other's faces, gripping, clutching, straining in effort at mastery. Again and again they crunched into the crowd, reeling from blows, or hurled back by sheer strength of muscles; they sobbed forth curses, staggering with weakness. I saw Lappin drive his head into his opponent's stomach as though it were a battering-ram; I saw the soldier sink his teeth into the fur-trader's hand, as if he were a mad dog. "Then the brute reached down and fumbled for his knife—found it, and, with one hoarse cry of triumph, sent the bright blade home. Twice he struck, and they went staggering down together, locked in each other's arms, the soldier dead ere he struck the ground."

"It was bedlam then, followed by a breathless hush as Lappin pressed forward with uplifted arms. Two warriors lifted Lappin to his feet, and, as his gripping hand plucked out the knife from the wound, I saw the gush of blood crimsoning the dead man's side. An instant the victor stood glaring down, reeling in weakness, upheld by others. Then he laughed, waving the dripping blade."

"Ah! good!" he cried. "There is one more recruit for my band. Bring the girl here. 'Tis time she had her lesson also."

"They brought her forward, a red brave grasping either arm. I caught sight of her face, white, drawn, but not with fear, and sighted my rifle across the log at the white woman's breast. With clinched fist he waited for my trigger. Yet I waited—thank God, I waited. I know not what restrained me, only it was no fear of consequences to myself. It must have been the expression of the woman's uplifted face, the quick glance she cast about, as though in silent warning to me. I took it as a signal, a message of restraint. The fur trader, burly and brutal, still panting for breath, yet able to stand alone now, and conscious of his victory, thrust his reeking knife back into his belt with a coarse laugh.

"How do you like that, you Wyandot squaw?" he asked, leering down into her face.

"When you have these men release my arms I will answer you," she returned quietly.

"Oh, you white boy! You'll be glad enough to talk before I am through. Let go of her there—yes; that's what I mean. Now look here—there lies your English officer. He's paid the price of being a fool. Look at him; are you ready to speak now?"

"He was nothing to me," she said slowly, "nothing to me." She fought man's fight, and was killed by cowardly treachery."

"What! You squaw, you dare—"

"Of course I dare. Do you suppose I fear you, Jules Lappin, or your gang of outlaws? No voice could I hear. Why, I challenge you to lay hand on me. You know who I am; you have eaten in the tepee of my father. I know who you are, and I despise you. You call me a Wyandot squaw; threaten what you will; point me to this dead man whom you have murdered. Why? To frighten me—no? Very well, I'll answer you. I am a Wyandot; I am Running Water; but in my veins flows also the best blood of France. Mine is not a race of cowards and murderers, thieves and traitors; my ancestors were soldiers and men. And you think I am afraid of you—you cur of the woods; afraid of you! Touch me, Jules Lappin, if you dare; I challenge you. Come, I wait for you to lay hand on me."

"He stared at her suddenly, angry enough, yet with the bullying look gone from his mottled face. Something about the girl—her sharp words, her cool defiance—had left him uncertain."

"More than that, Jules Lappin," she went on passionately; "you are going to pay for all this," and she pointed down at his belt, "pay for it, do you understand? That man was who you blotted from memory already the fate of Michael Cozard? You were in our village when the chiefs of the Wy-andots dealt out justice to these renegades. Answer me!"

The cool boldness of her words stunned the fellow. I could see him glance about into the dark woods, and then at the faces of the savages pressing about them. Few among them understood what was said, and their gestures, the fierce expression of their eyes, gave the renegade courage. He had already gone too far for retreat; his only chance now was to proceed—to browbeat this girl, frighten her, and trust to the wilderness for a hiding place.

"Stand aside, all of you; get back and give us room, you red scum!" he roared, his rage increasing as he gave it vent in words. "Well, I've heard you talk, all of it, you breed, and that's what I care for your threats," and he snapped his fingers in her face. As she stood silent, motionless, looking straight at him with scorn unutterable in her eyes, the brute clinched his red fist, stepping forward as if he would strike.

"Curse you! I'm a mind to let you have some of the same medicine I gave him. You'll laugh at Jules Lappin, will you? Oh, ho! but I know a better way than that to make you cry. By all the gods, we'll roast that Yankee friend of yours to a turn, and you'll stand by and watch. What'll fetch the bones of you, you cur of a breed?"

Shawnee, two of you come here. Pick up this carrion, and throw it out of the way, over there in the edge of the wood. We'll wait this place presently. See-to-wah!"

"The chief is here," with dignity, "I shall vote that the hunter die by torture."

"It was so spoken."

"Then he shall—to spite this squaw of a Wyandot if for do-better reason. Bid your warriors do the dog up."

For the moment, in the confusion, the noise and rushing back and forth of figures dimly seen in the twilight, I lost sense of what was being done. There was a babel of yells, a wild mingling of half-naked forms dancing about through the shadows. Those whose identity I could comprehend had been swallowed up by the rush of bodies yet to see, then the fierce Shavonee, two of you come here. Pick up this carrion, and throw it out of the way, over there in the edge of the wood. We'll wait this place presently. See-to-wah!"
